Temperatures Are To Be Controlled Panel on First

Temperature-sensing temperature controls are being installed throughout the Administration building. The controls will regulate the temperatures during the day and thermostatic control at night are the main features of this system.

Heat control zones will cover the entire Administration building. The zones will be regulated at a main control panel on the first floor behind the bulletin board.

Zoning Is Important

Each zone will be equipped with a new piece of equipment called Duo-Stat. This unit will consist of two liquid-filled temperature-sensitive bulbs and a panel with regulating valves and thermostats. One bulb will be exposed outside the building and the other will rest directly on the radiator.

The information received at the Duo-Stat panel will determine the position of the steam regulating valves. A constant temperature, present in the individual panels, will be maintained between 73 degrees and 75 degrees.

Clock to Check

For temperature control at night six Duo-Stats will be connected electrically to a clock on the main panel board. At a pre-set time, control of the entire system will be shifted to a thermostat which can be set manually from day to day. A reverse procedure will take place in the mornings early enough that the building can reach a comfortable temperature before classes begin.

Mr. Jack Crane, of the Johnson Service Co. in Kansas City, is installing the new equipment. He expects the system to be ready for operation in two or three weeks.

BEFORE AND AFTER . . . shots show Hal Holbrook as himself and as he appears after a two-hour make-up session of turning himself into a replica of humorist Mark Twain.

Hal Holbrook Comes Monday

Hal Holbrook, noted television actor, will appear in his famous role as Missouri author-humorist Mark Twain at the 10 a. m. assembly in the College auditorium Monday, March 17.

Holbrook has achieved a nationwide reputation by bringing Mark Twain back to life to modern audiences in his performance, entitled "Mark Twain Tonight." He recreates the sort of solo entertainment for which the humorist was internationally famous.

Has Varied Material

Largely because his long New York engagement—which extended to seven months in a Greenwich Village nightclub—required constant changes of material, Holbrook can perform Twain for more than three hours without repeating himself. He chooses his show from this supply, usually selecting his stories as he goes along. His repertoire ranges from familiar episodes in "Huckleberry Finn" to the less familiar and salty comments with which Twain tickled the ribs of people of his time.

Spends Two Hours on Make-up

Holbrook, who is only 32 years old, spends more than two hours before each performance to turn himself into the image of the 70-year-old Mark Twain. Thirty minutes of this time goes into creating the baggy eye and shaggy eyebrow effects. He uses seven make-up shades, calls his technique "something like finger-painting." Holbrook has also had television experience, appearing as a leading player in "The Brighter Day" for the past four years.

By recapturing the mannerism of Twain, Holbrook amuses present-day audiences much as Twain did years ago.

'Night Must Fall' To Be Presented Today at 2 p.m.

From high up on the judges' stand the voice proclaims there should be no mercy for those who cause death. The voice speaks to you from a white face bathed in red light. Why is he saying that?

Away in the distance a church bell sounds morning. In the forest, isolated from other life and activity, is the house. Brown woodwork and furniture, starkly bare in October's sunlight, cast black shadows in the Victorian room. Dull copper antiques and wall plaques contrast with green walls.

Oil lamps in the room say that electricity, like civilization and humanity, is far away. On the windows lonesome pines stand as the only companions to the house.

Morning is in the air. Sparkling morning. This afternoon in the auditorium you will learn that "Night Must Fall."

College Farm Serves as Laboratory and Source Of Supply While Used in Training of Students

Covering 180 acres of campus grounds, the college farm serves as the agriculture department laboratory as well as a source of supply of some of the dairy products for the Union cafeteria.

The primary function of the farm, which is owned and operated by the College, is to demonstrate to the students good farming practices. Charged with teaching these principles are Mr. R. T. Wright, farm director, and Mr. F. B. Houghton.

Some "City Boys" Join Group

Although most of the students in the agriculture field come from rural homes and communities, there are some "city boys," says Mr. Wright, who are ag majors.

Pure-bred cattle and hogs, and poultry are raised on the farm.

Sheep have also been raised there in the past. Hybrid corn tests are carried on in collaboration with the U. S. Department of Agriculture and the University of Missouri.

Production Is Purpose

However, the College farm is not an experimental station, Mr. Wright emphasizes. Production is one of its chief aims and it has been largely self sustaining, although expansion at the College is slowly taking away farm grounds. About 20 of its former 200 acres at the northwest corner of the campus have been absorbed.

Annually the farm produces from 80 to 100 hogs, presently landrace, and maintains about 200 laying hens. The dairy herd consists of 50 head of pure-bred jersey, and the beef animals are 10 shorthorn cows and calves.

Farm Is Mechanized

Included in the mechanized side of the farm are mechanical milkers and coolers, a hay baler, combine, and two tractors. One of these tractors was given the college by the state of Missouri last year.

Employed as dairyman at the farm is Raymond Lorange. Louie Randall serves as the farm foreman, caring for the machinery and crops. During the summer months a few college students are able to find work at the farm.

A visitor to the farm may wonder at the enthusiastic greeting sometimes received from the kennels just east of the farm buildings. These miniature sheep dogs are the hobby and pets of the dairyman, Mr. Lorange.

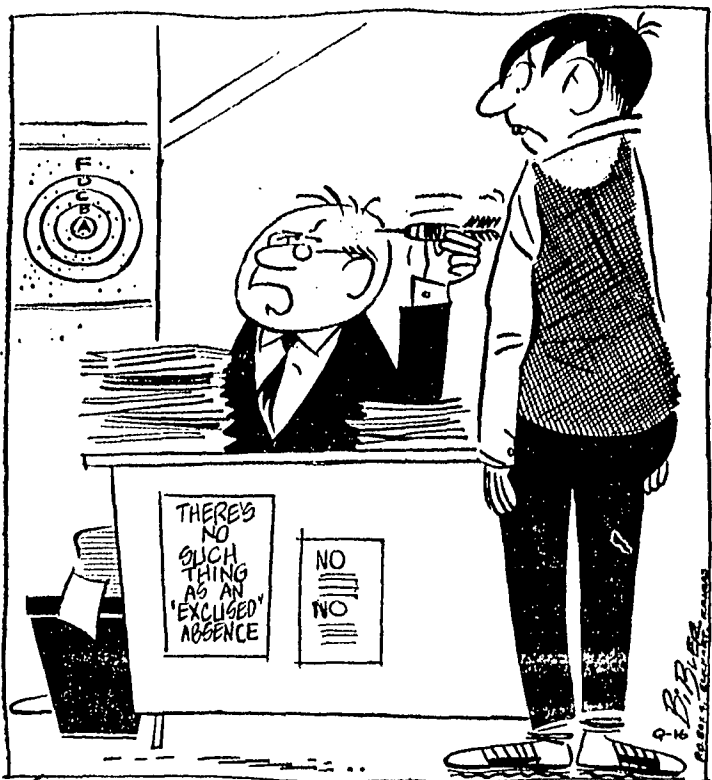

COLLEGE FARM FOREMAN

... Louis Randall is sitting on the new tractor obtained by the agriculture department this January. Bids were received by the state, the lowest being from Craven-Hooper Implement Company of Maryville. (Photo by Green).

DAISY AND QUEEN . . . "are the finest pair of mules that ever existed," according to E. T. Wright, chairman of the agriculture department. The two worked for the college from 1926 to 1948. They were broken when the basement was dug for the gymnasium.

For Senate Nominations . . .

Nominations for president and vice-president of the Student Senate will be made from the floor of the nominating convention in speeches not to exceed five minutes for each. Nominations may be made only from the file of candidates as published in the Northwest Missourian.

Academic regulations for candidates are as follows: The student must have a grade-point average of 1.0, or M. He must have completed at least 50 hours of college work, at least 30 of which must have been completed in residence at this college.

April 3 Is the Day . . .

Parents' Day, which will be April 3, the day Easter vacation begins, will give parents an opportunity to see first-hand the work and activities of their sons and daughters.

Organizational displays and classes will present parents an idea of the achievements of their offspring.

Improvements on campus indicate the trend of an increasing enrollment. Parents should have a feeling of pride that their sons and daughters are receiving the full benefit of a higher education.

As time marches on and the college progresses, students and their parents have a right to feel proud of Northwest Missouri State College.—Charles Jones.

THE COLLEGE OATH

"We will never bring disgrace to this, our College, by any act of cowardice or dishonesty. We will fight for the ideals and sacred things of the College. We will revere and obey the College laws and do our best to invite a like respect and reverence in others. We will transmit this College to those who come after us, greater, better, and more beautiful than it was transmitted to us."

Three Speakers Conclude Week of Emphasis On Religious Theme, 'The Will to Believe'

"The Will to Believe" was the theme carried out by three outstanding speakers during last week's observance of Religious Emphasis Week. Dr. Marcus Bach, professor in the school of religion at the State University of Iowa, was the main speaker of the week.

Father Arnold Blaes, of the Conception Abbey at Conception, gave the assembly talk on Thursday. Miss Anderine Farmer, director of student work of the Kansas City Baptist association, spoke in various classes.

Bach Gave Keynote

Dr. Bach's keynote speech Sunday evening, March 2, was entitled "The Will to Believe." In his talk he mentioned three areas in which people are in danger of losing their will to believe or have already lost it.

He defined the three areas as the will to believe in something greater and higher than ourselves, the will to believe in the world and the life around us, and the will to believe in the world of the life within us. In the second area he said that it is necessary that people learn to live together in order to live at all.

Discussed Second Mile

Dr. Bach's title was "The Second Mile" when he spoke in the opening assembly Monday morning. Dr. Bach said that the religious person has three parts—traditionalism, intellectualism, and mysticism, or experimentalism, as he called it. To each of these, however, must be added a "second mile."

To traditionalism, which he defined as affiliation with a parental church, must be added the second mile of a sense of religious give and take with other denominations.

To Walk With Leaders

To intellectualism must be added the factor of believability that cannot be intellectually proved. As the mystical or experimental element in religion, he advised appreciation and admiration of people one wishes he were like; the second mile is to walk with such people.

Dr. Bach described his personal relationships with Dr. Albert Schweitzer in his talk, "The Gospel of the Quest," at 2 p. m. Tuesday. Dr. Bach said that he learned three important things from Schweitzer. They were that the person who fulfills his quest takes the talents he has and invests them to the best in order to better the world; that life should not be measured by duration but by donation; and that one must be willing to give a little bit more to life and to the world than is expected of him.

To Measure by Donation

In Dr. Bach's fourth and final talk of the week, entitled "Russia's Challenge to Our Faith," he described some of his experiences on a recent trip to the Soviet Union. He said that Communism has been said to be Russia's substitute for religion. To the Communist, "birth is a biological phenomenon, life is a product of the environment, and death is inevitable extinction." The "holy trinity" consists of the father, Marx; the son, Engels, and the holy spirit, Lenin.

Dr. Bach advised his listeners to "appreciate the opportunity you have to seek and find God according to the liberty and heritage that is yours."

Must Have Faith

Father Arnold Blaes of Conception Seminary spoke on "Faith or Despair" at the closing assembly of Religious Emphasis Week Thursday morning. His talk was on the theme of optimism.

He said that people are turning science into a God, and that because of this, society is becoming pessimistic. Father Blaes went on to say that we must get back our belief in God.

"We must have faith or despair," he said, and "despair is the decision of fools."

Campus Reith's

On March 5, for a brief time, the campus was a land of serene peace.

Young Democrats and Young Republicans gathered together to discuss politics and the role religion plays in the lives of our government leaders. For fifteen minutes, Democrats and Republicans laid aside their political arguments to discuss Religious Emphasis Week.

Then as the joint meeting broke up, Republicans and Democrats went their separate ways. If one could hear both meetings at the same time, it would be hard to believe that only a few moments before these groups were agreeing upon issues.

At the Democrat meeting, members learned who was to blame for all of our troubles in the United States, and at the same time the Republicans were also told of the causes of the troubles. They didn't agree upon who was to take credit or to be blamed for important issues of the day. But this seems to be a well-established characteristic of the parties.

Springfield to Compete For Small College Title After Victorious Season

Spring did spring. And Fall did fall While Springfield triumphed Over all (but one).

Max Oldham and Jack Israel, both all - conference selections, sprung Springfield loose to a victorious season in the M. I. A. A. conference basketball competition and a berth in the NCAA small college tournament. The only loss came at the hands of second place Kirksville.

Rolla, in spite of the efforts of the conference scoring leader, John Sturm, finished in the cellar. Maryville, who finished in a tie for fifth position at the end of the 1956-57 season, retained that spot by pulling an upset over Cape Girardeau during the season. This loss cost Cape sole possession of third as they tied Warrensburg with a 5-5 record.

Random Shots . . .

Congratulations are in order to Marland Ray and Leland Jackson. Marland was named as co-captain on the M.I.A.A. All-Conference team and tied for third for the sportsman award. Leland was placed on the second team and was quite impressive as the season progressed.

Stalwart of the successful wrestling team, Doyle "Tank" Thomas, was the only wrestler to defeat 350 pound Ben Disselhoff from William Jewell. Benny was last year's A.A.U. District Champion and was undefeated until the match with "Tank." In the rematch "Tank" pinned him. Jerry Marrs, Wayne Anderson, Larry Schweizer, Marvin Reaksecker, Bob Myers, and Bill Young also contributed to the successful wrestling season for Coach H. D. Peterson and Maryville's first year on the mats.

Lettermen to Head Cat Diamond Squad

By J. Gwynn Howard

Nine returning lettermen head a group of "resin-fingered" baseballers, who can hardly wait until the 'Cat diamond is skinned and in shape for the regular season.

Scalp-hungry Rodskins from Omaha University will bring a war party to the Bearcat den on April 2. The game will be a single header, and will be played at two o'clock in the afternoon.

Depth Is Needed

Lettermen Kensil Walker, Ron Cain, Fred Fuhr, and Al Brooks promise to make the Bearcat king of the pitchers' mound. This depth is sorely needed as the remainder of the contests, with the exception of the first, will be double headers. Coach Tremble has also mentioned the fact that two other prospects could mature enough to see action this spring.

Last year's three leading bats are returning to head the base and outfield nucleus. These heavy clubbers are Craig Summa, first base; Fred Reeves, short stop; and Russ Davenport, center field. Jack Little, second base, and Tom Groves, catcher, fill out the list of "M" winners who are back to fill the air with their "pep across the pond."

Hurlers Have Support

Though Coach Tremble has not had a chance to work with the team, the pitcher's mound seems to be amply manned, with a substantial sprinkling of seasoned playmakers to give the hurler "moral" support.

Here is the season schedule:

Apr. 2—Omaha, here.

Apr. 15—William Jewell, here.

Apr. 19—Graceland, here.

Apr. 28—William Jewell, there.

Apr. 29—Central Mo. State, there.

May 10—Graceland, there.

May 13—Peru, there.

May 14—Kansas City, here.

May 16—Central Mo. State, here.
